Lower Timeframe Bullish Order Flow

Created	@August 16, 2021 12:41 PM
Tags

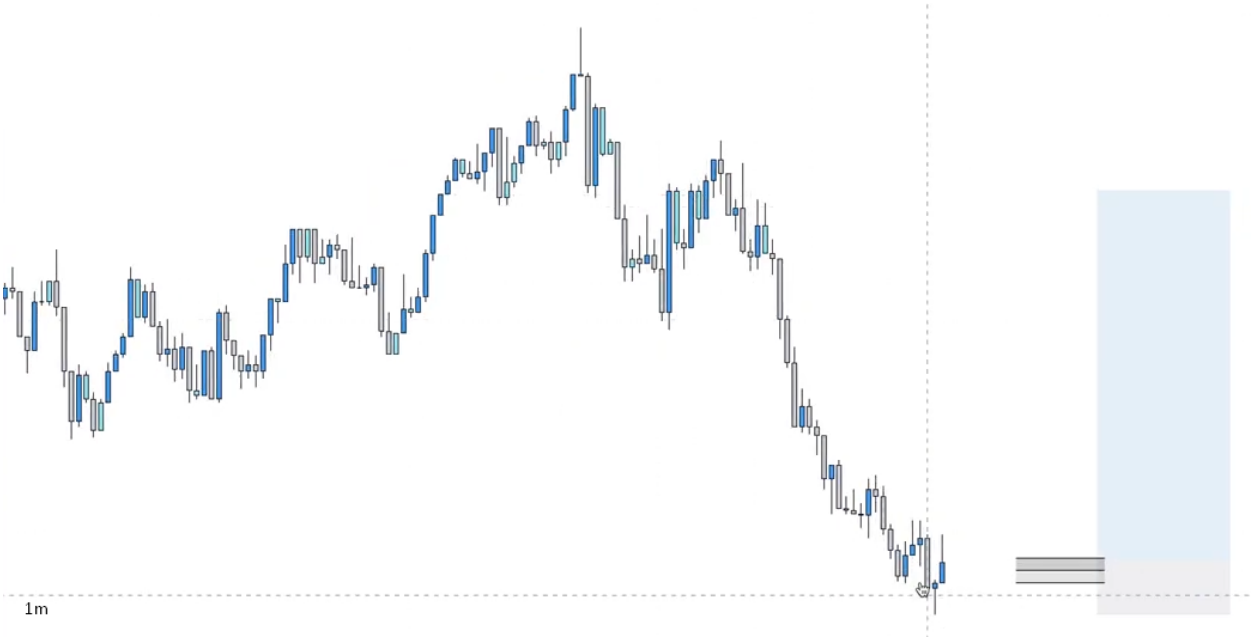

Here what we wanna do is utilizing LTF order flow, because I think a lot of people wait for one sort of entry or OB, when really once price can continue to push up, bos. We can sort of use order flow to see multiple entries, because there is more than 1 entry, there is actually quite a few we can get.

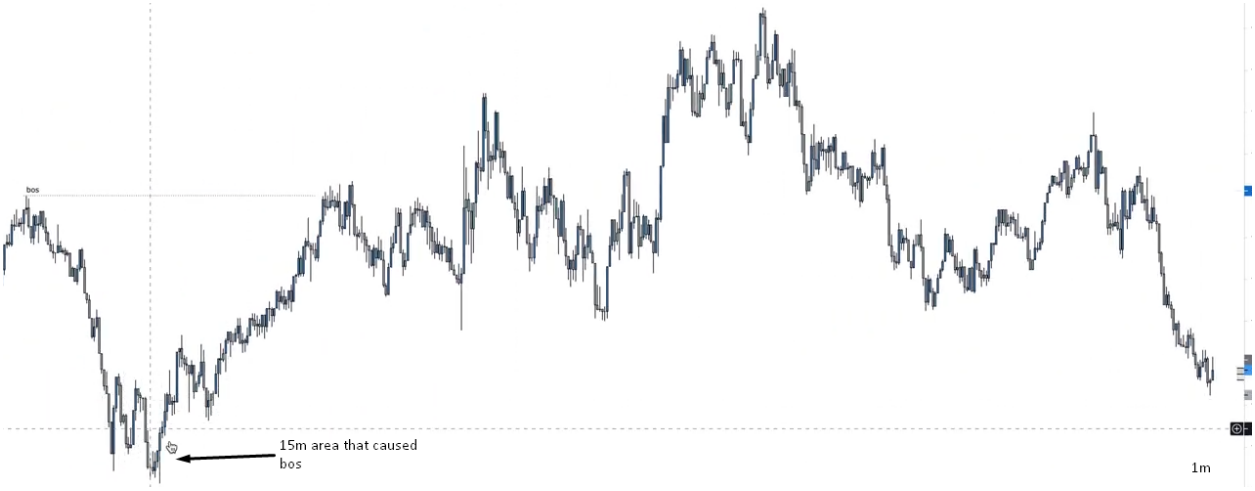

So we are going to go through a trade on GU, now this is the 15m. So if we look at this bit of price action here, we had a low and a LH. We had a nice bullish move that bos, so that creates this area down here.

We have this last down move before the up move, but then this 2 candles haven´t really engulfed, but for me I would be looking at this candle here for price to come back into either taking entries from here, or dropping down to LTF, like 1m or 5m, and looking for entries once we get that confirmation.

Now the price has come back into that area and we are going to come down to the 1m.

And this is that area so that is the 15m push up that caused the bos.

So price is now trading within that. Now Im going to go through it and just show the order flow we get to the upside.

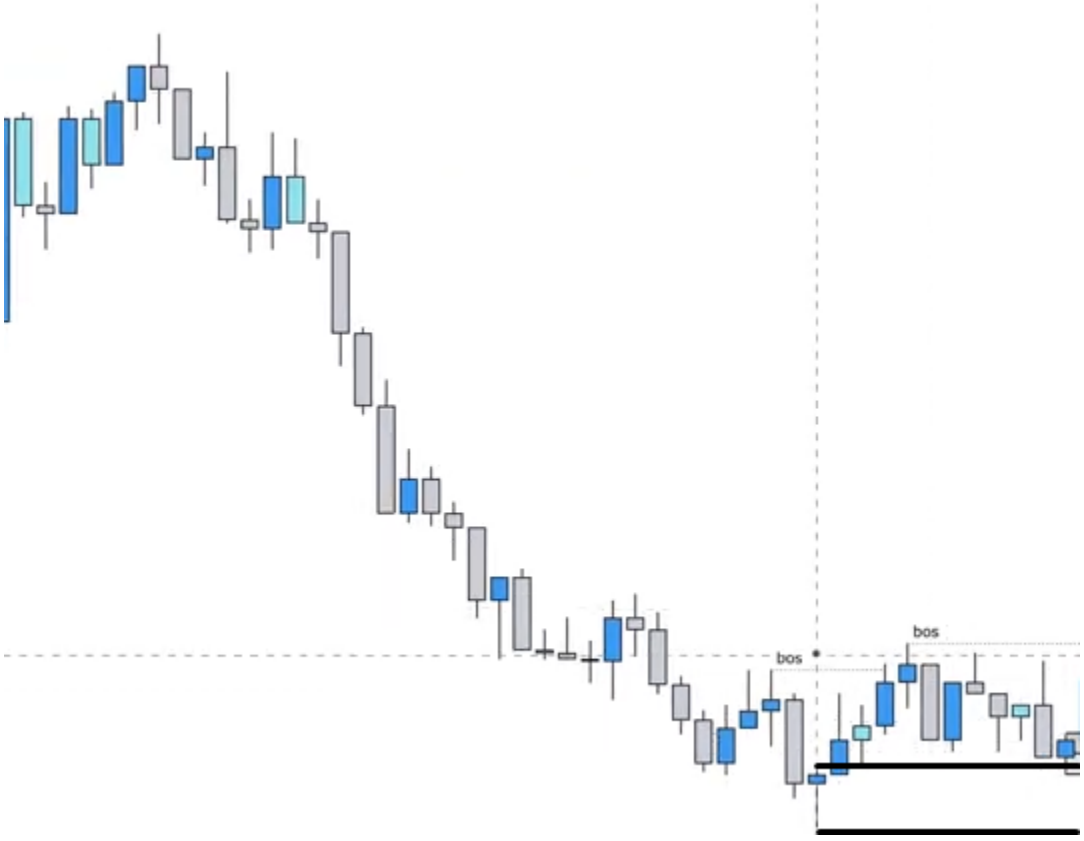

So this price action here, we have a low and LH, so what I would want to see is that push up showing me that change in market structure above the high, and then to see if we can get a push back into that area, and then we can see the move to the upside.

So that would be the forecast, so lets just see what once we bring price forward a little bit. So we get wick this high here, but we haven´t actually closed above.

Until this next candle, but its not really showing much progression, but it is still a bos, so we can mark that on, there is a a bos, but for me I would be waiting for a double bos. So push down, another bos and then look for that.

If we used this bos, our OB would be this candle below and price tapped there.

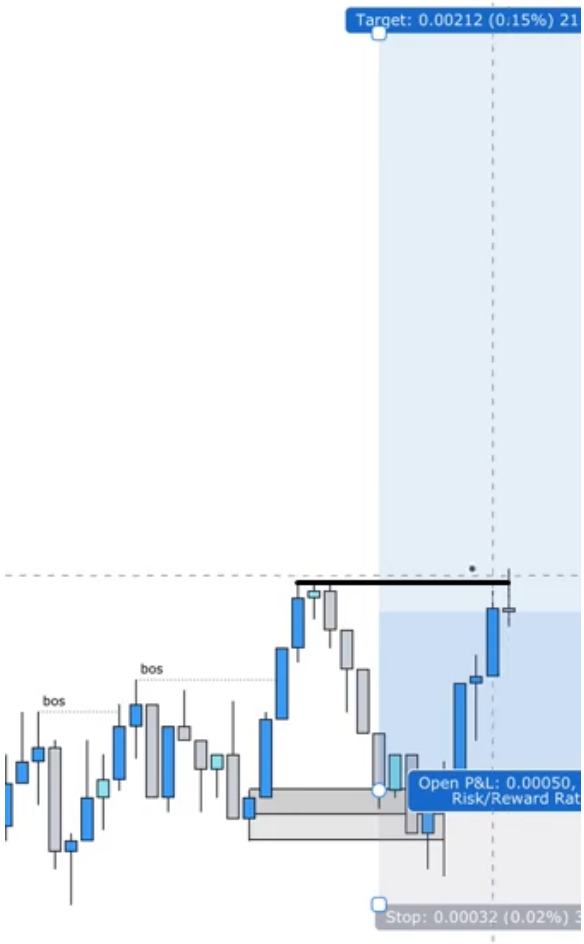

We push down and have a nice push, so we have a double bos now which is stacking the confluence for more upside on this pair. So we have bos, pullback, mitigation of the bos we didn´t used, bos, las down move is here, but then we have little candle that doesn´t engulf the candle before. So this is where we will be looking to get involved.

So once we had that bos, my entry would be set at the top of that OB with a stop loss. For me I would account for this wick, so we can see I put it on that wick, 3.2pips it doens ´t make sense for me to have a 1.4 pips stop loss if put below OB. Just for my own testing really.

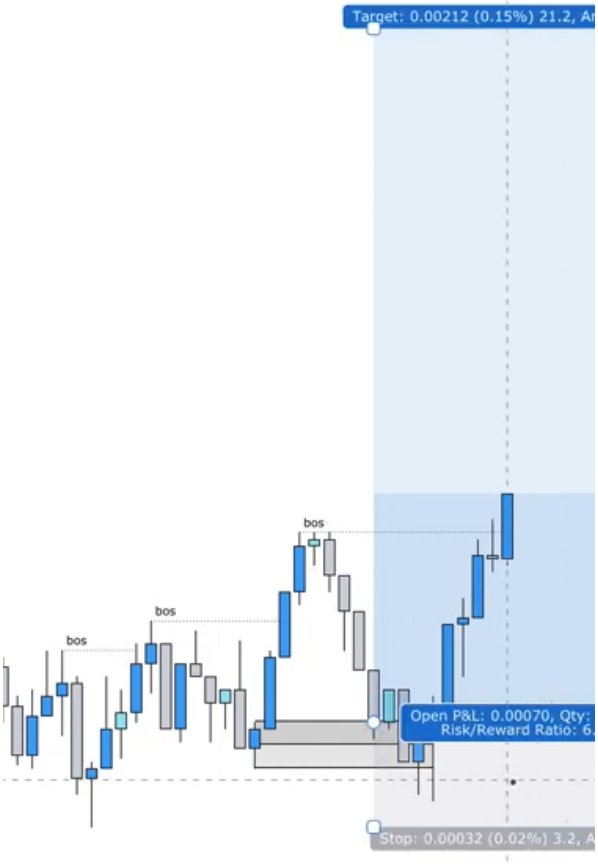

So we one more candle pushes up, then we start to retrace refilling any imbalance that was also left as well, and then we tap in, come into the equilibrium or just falling short of it. We tap in again, we mitigate the majority of this candle here, and then we push lower and then we start to see that momentum kick in.

> Now we haven´t quite bos yet. But if we was in this trade, how would we managing this?

Well I want to see a bos first, we haven´t bos above and closed. We just wicked it.

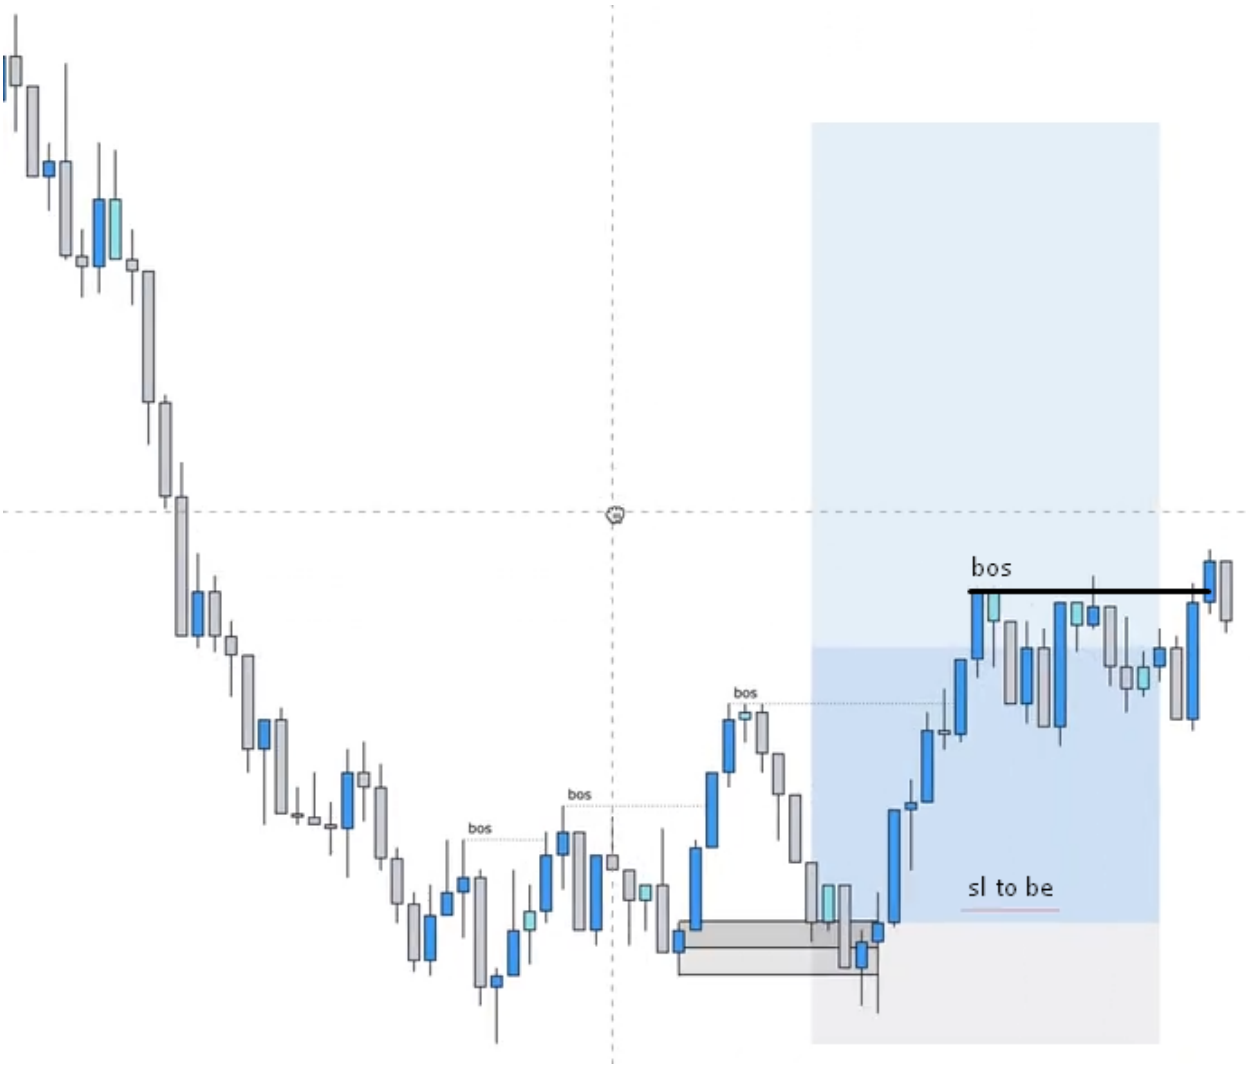

So now we have bos.

Now would I move to BE here?

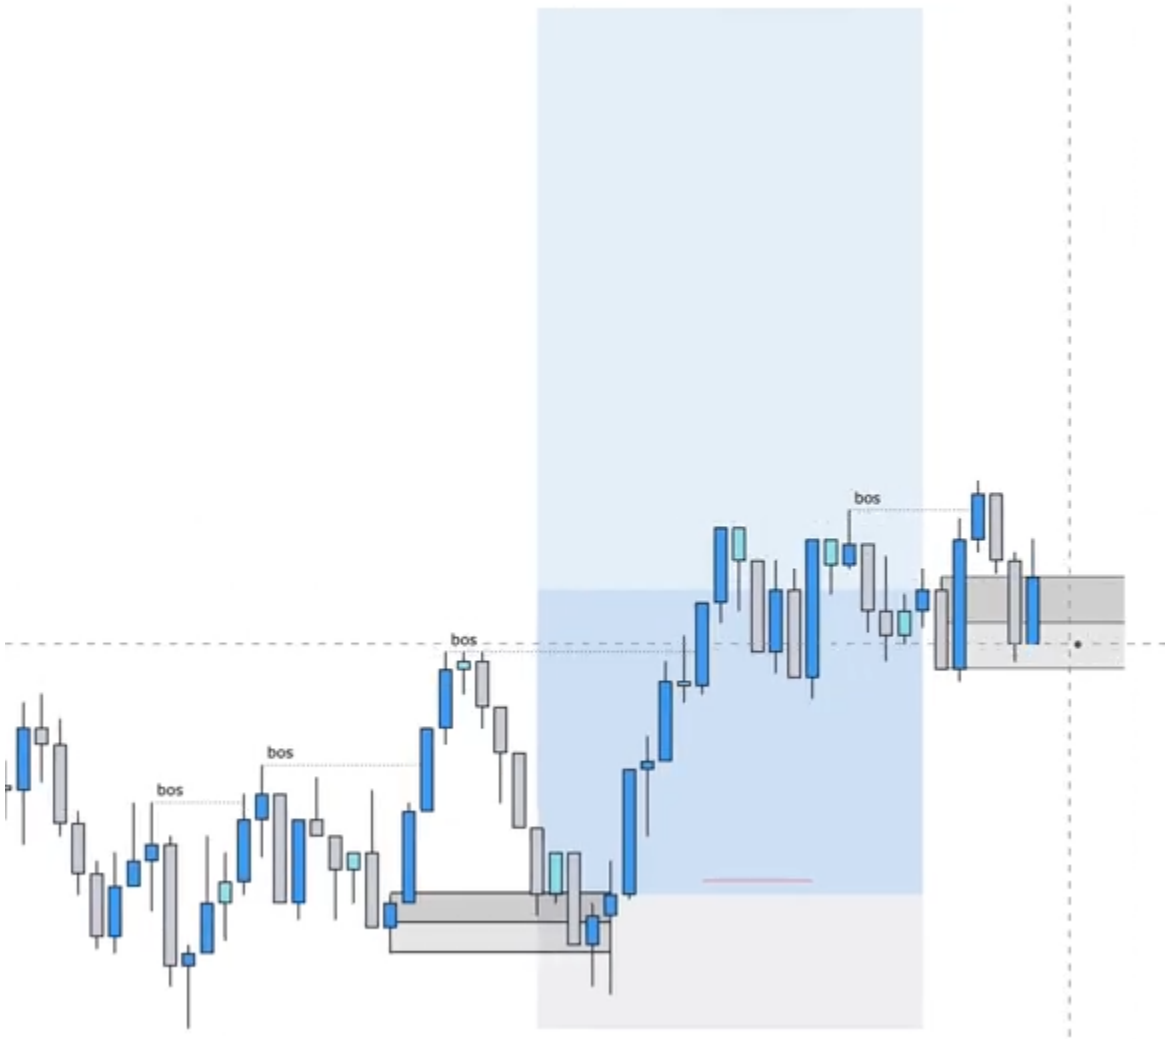

Not really, because its still possible that we could come back to mitigate this move here before continuing.

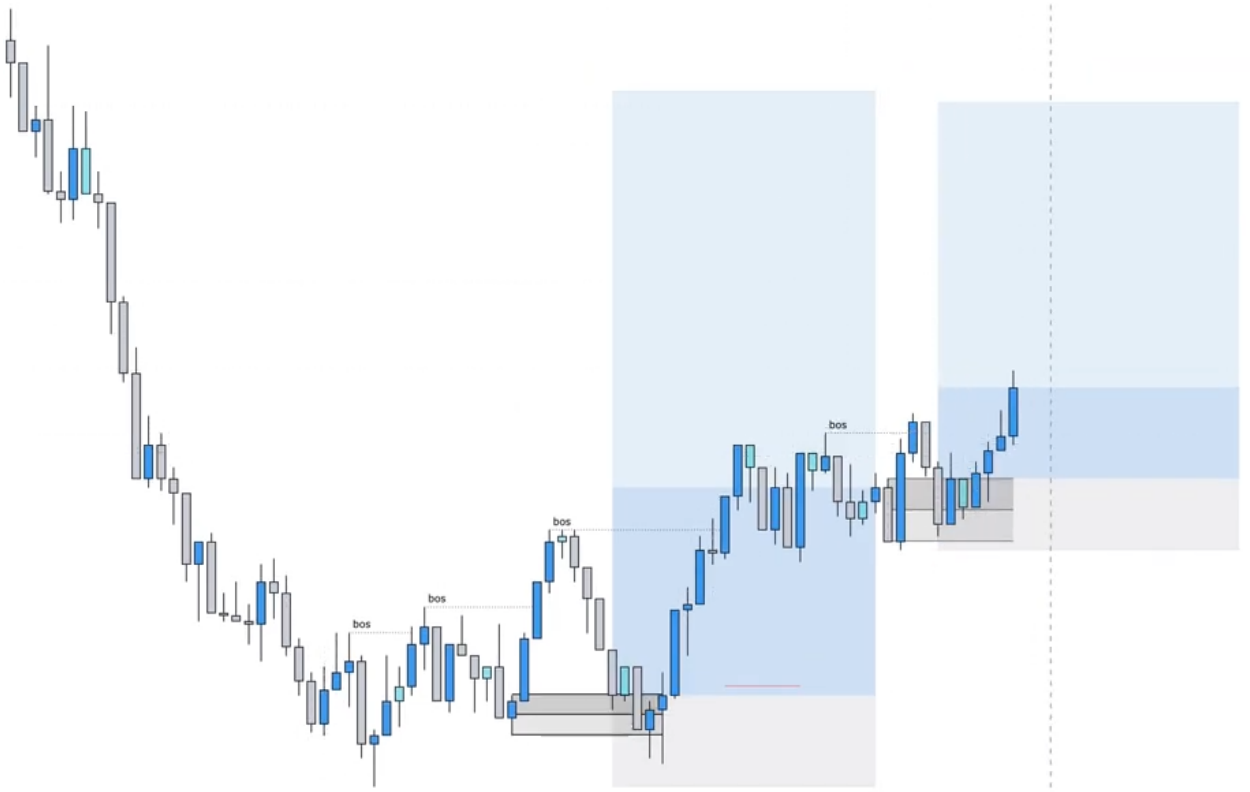

So Im just going to wait a little bit and see if we can actually get a push off. And we are ranging, and then we do bos, so at this point I would be at BE, just above. So risk free on the trade.

Now what do we have next?

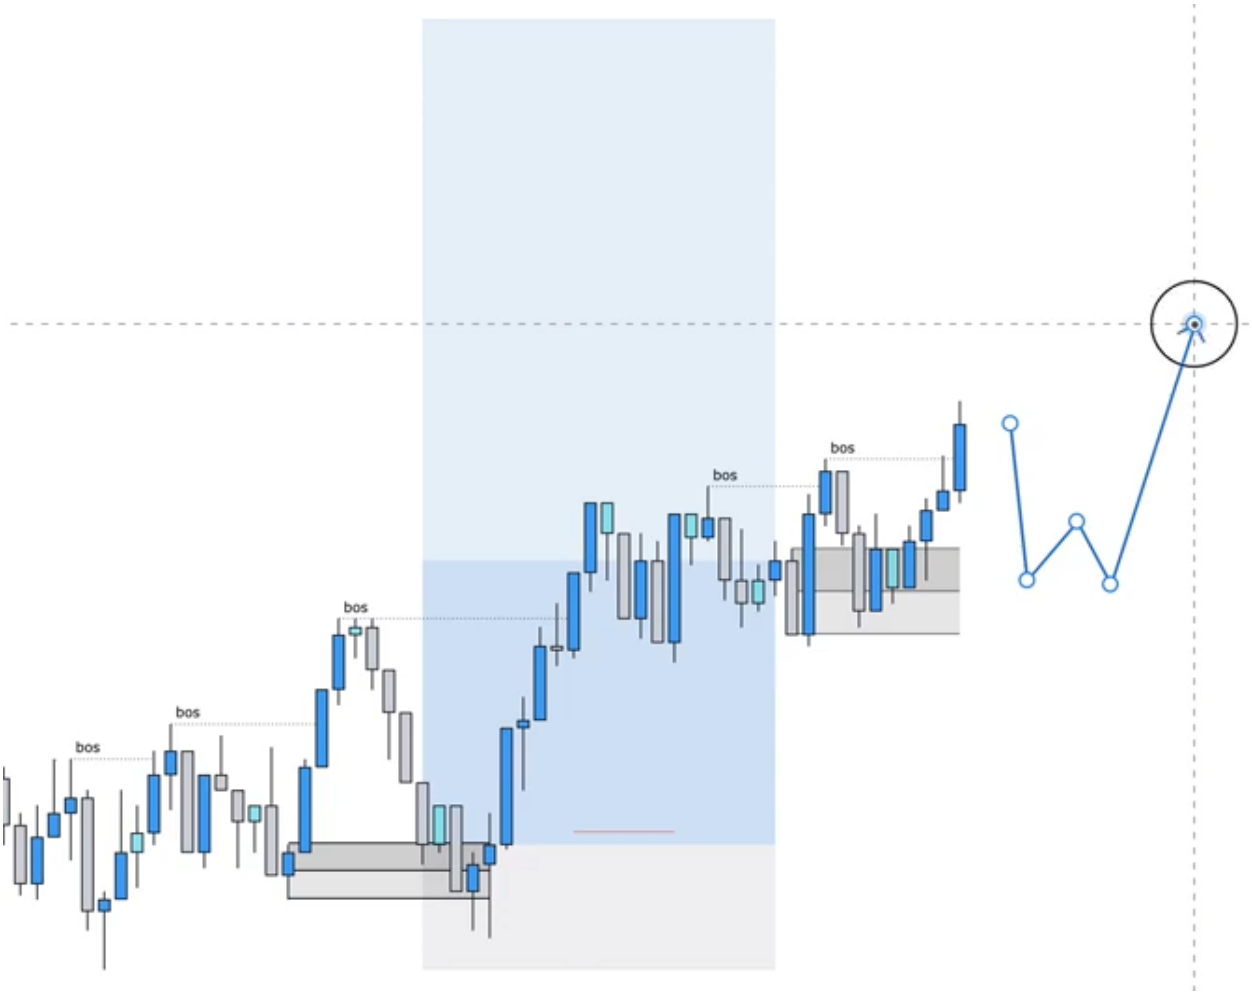

Well we have bos again, so if we wasn´t in this trade, then we could be looking at this, last down move before the price that caused this structure to break. We come down to mitigate, and we don´t come below it.

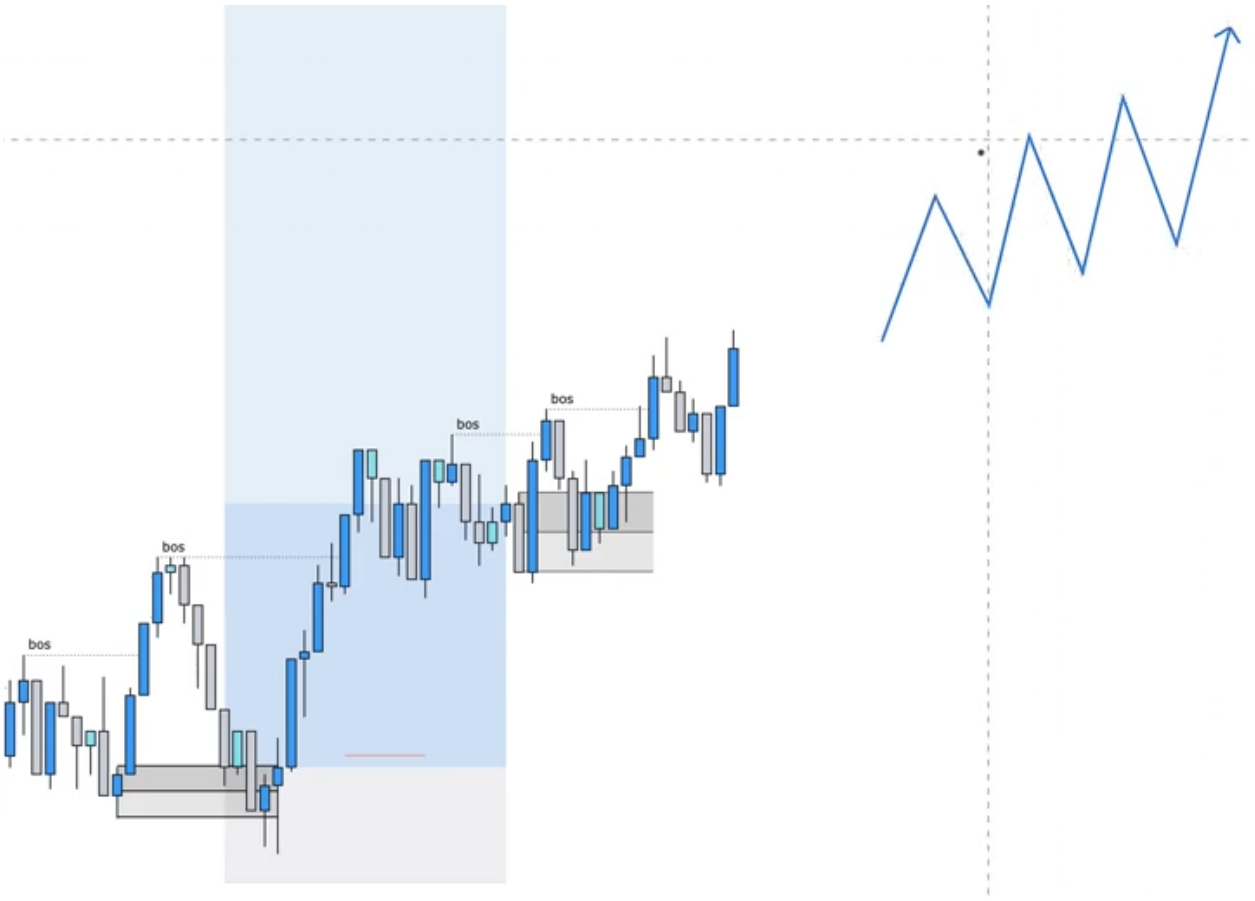

So this is another entry, we could be entering here with 2.5 pips stop loss, just below this wick, and then this would be our first entry, if we wasn´t in the trade from down here.

*But Im going to take off, because I don´t want to overlay the chart with too much drawings.

Next we have a bos, wicked and then we closed above. So do we have another area, or we have this inside bar, which price could come down to before continuing up.

So we don´t quite come to the inside bar, so if we had an entry set, then we wouldn´t have been filled.

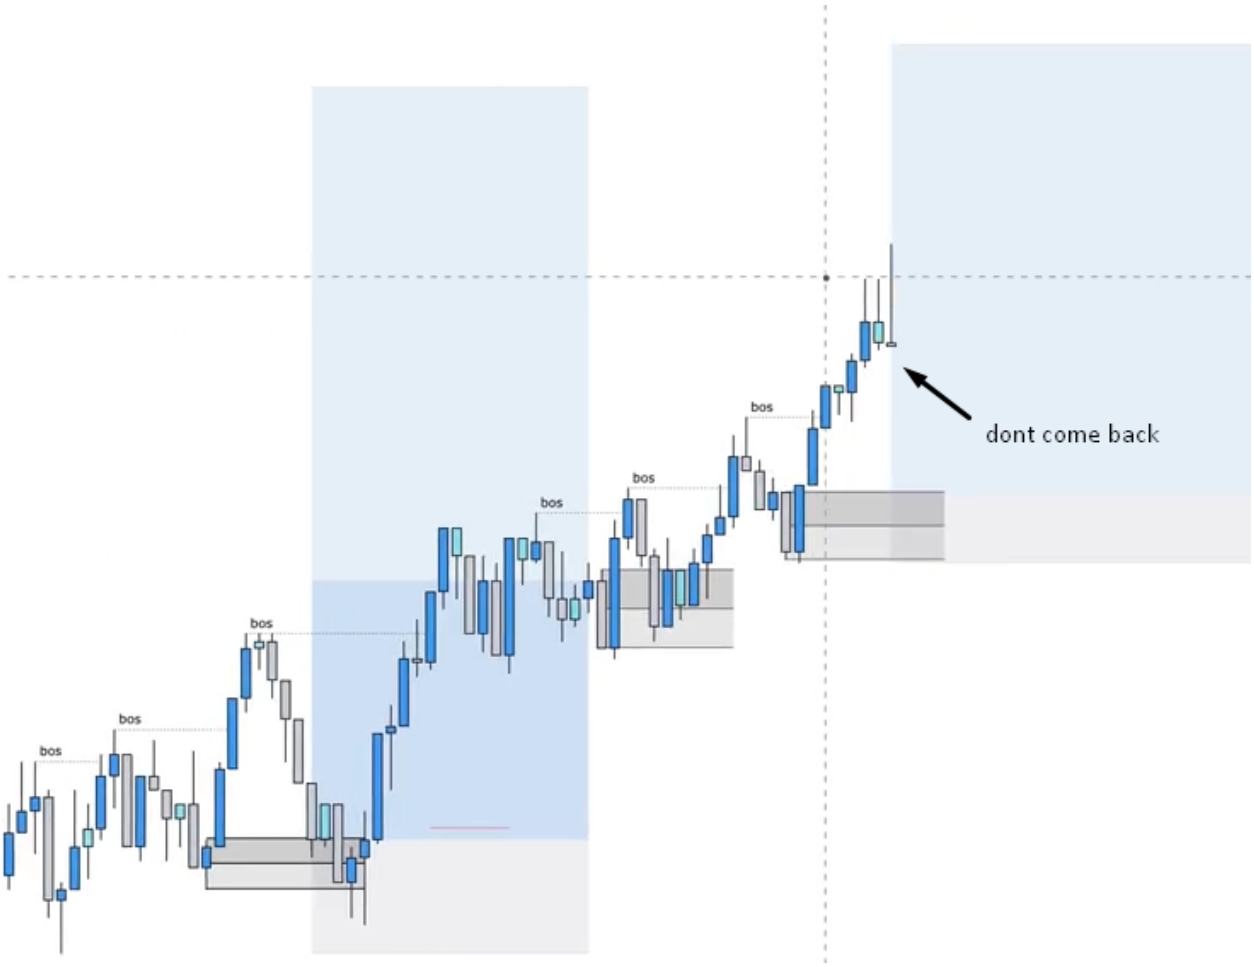

Now going back to the first trade, managing under this lows, because we are seeing order flow now. So what that means is we are basically bos, mitigating and continuing.

Its showing intent in the market due to that reason I would be sort of managing under this lows, with this trade here, so locking in more profit as we bos.

Because the anticipation of this sort of price chart is we are going to keep producing HHs and HLs and not bos below previous HLs.

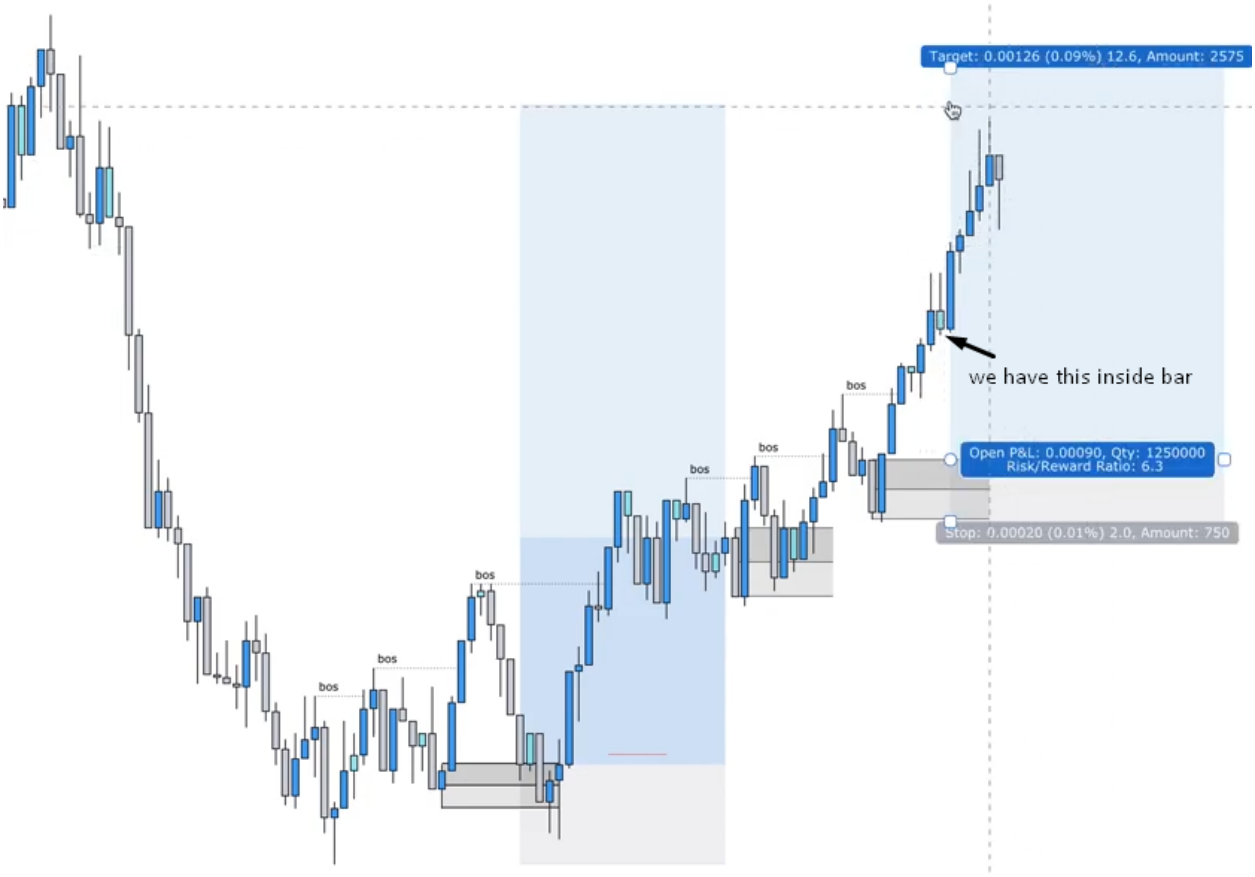

Once we do that the order flow is pretty much is it could be changing.

> Next we do bos again, and what does that leave?

Well lets look at the last down move, and then the move after is where price bos. So this are all OBs, 1m OBs. So again we can set an entry, with 2 pips stop loss, and did we come back? No, we do push off.

> Now at this point would is it valid to keep this entry on or take it off?

Well for me its valid, because we haven´t pulled back, essentially we had this inside bar, but we haven´t pulled back and bos.

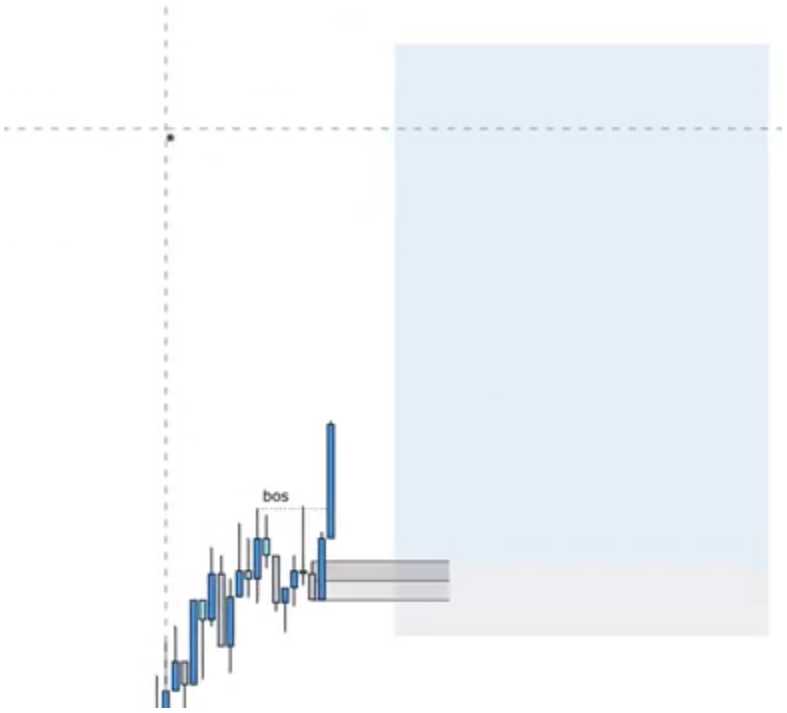

So at this point, we have sort of pulled back, bos. So we can it off, and see if we can get another sort of pullback and entry.

Now here we can see the difference with price action, we have impulsively broken. So the last down move is here, before the move that caused the bos.

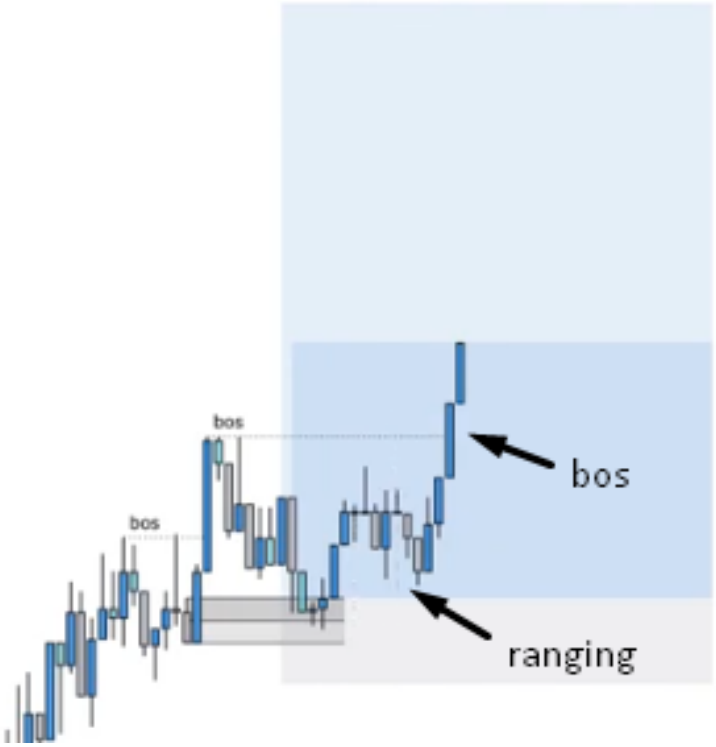

So this are all the entries, so we can class this 3 trades that would have been tagged in, this not, and then 5th trade.

Now this 5th trade, we put stop loss, I would be accounting for this wick, because this is the most recent HL currently, HH, HL. So we could wick down here and continuing.

So the stop loss would be 2.5 pips.

Now ranging and we bos, so this is beautiful order flow to the upside, bos.

> Now where would my stop loss be from this trade down here?

Well, lets look at where the most recent HL is.

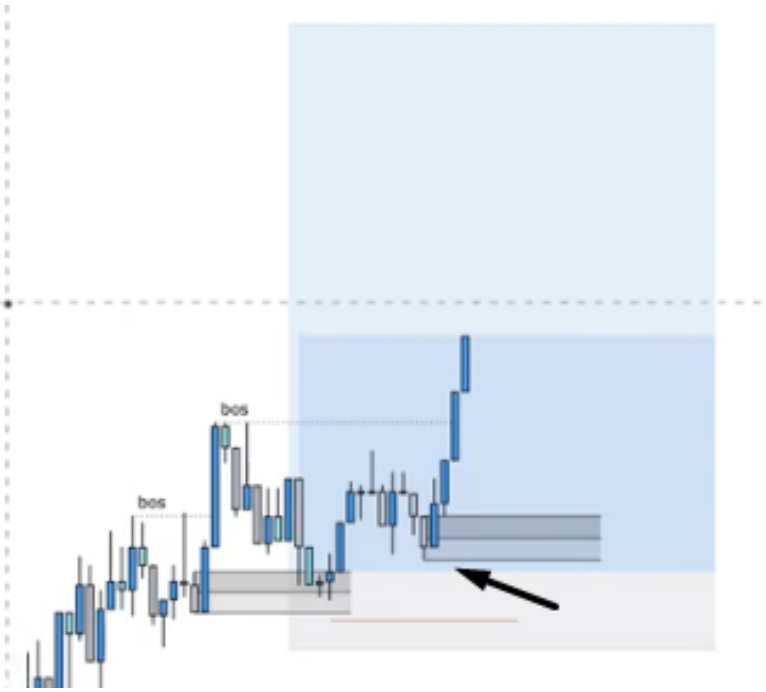

We have bos, and we have this HL here, but the lowest point from this sort of range and initiation out is here, this candle here. So that is where Im going to place my stop loss, because I don´t want to really put it at this HL here, because we see an order flow, so the anticipation is for price to come down to fill and mitigate this move before the order flow continues.

So I don´t want to get tagged out, so Im going to keep it at this HL here or a couple pips or 1 pip below.

So how much profit is that 1st trade?

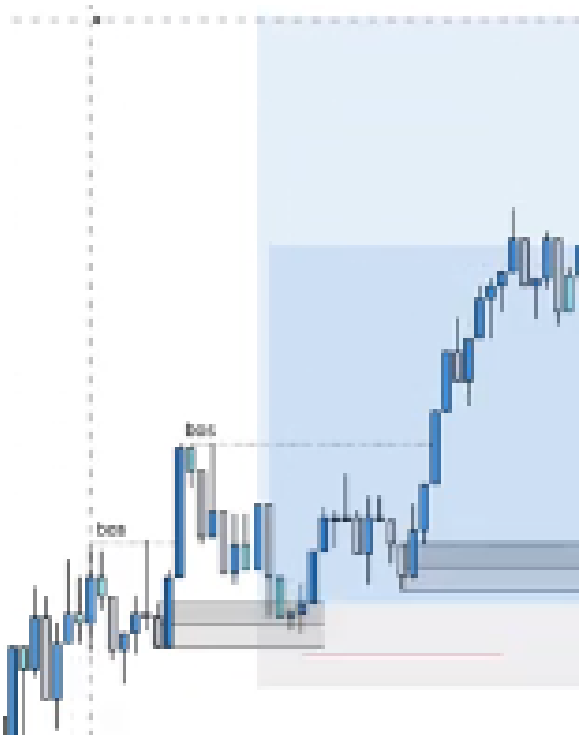

Is 6.72RR and we are on the 1m, so what is that, we got in here 1h30. So is brilliant, but lets continue.

So again bos, last down move is here.

> Now I do recommend all of us to go and do this and backtesting it, so we can see how we can implement it and sort of improve because the more we do it our pick up on little tweaks, 1% tweaks that we can just keep implementing and just ultimately get better as a trader.

Okay its a bos, are we going to push down, that is the anticipation.

> Now I don´t like saying expectation, I know people say expectation order flow, but I think once we start expecting something to happen, I think the opposite happens and I think a few of we can probably agree with that, once we expect price to move higher it just probably it moves low, like that is just trading. So I rather like to anticipate rather than expect, but its just my personal preference.

So now we are ranging, building some liquidity at this lows, and we have got EQH as well.

So for me this holds more weight for price to come down to last down candle to sort of grab liquidity, before continuing.

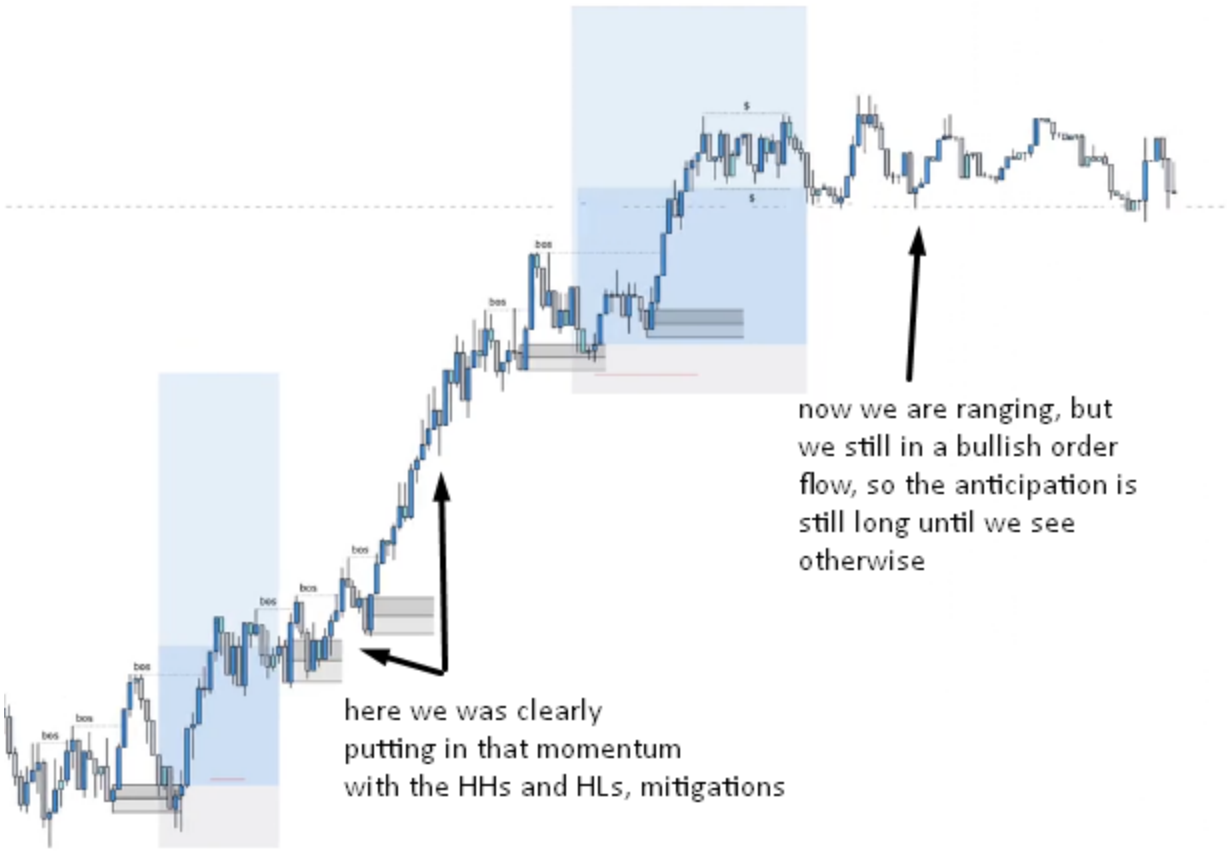

So we push down out of this range, and we push up, so this is so typical.

So we range, come down taking sell side liquidity and then away we push up above the EQH.

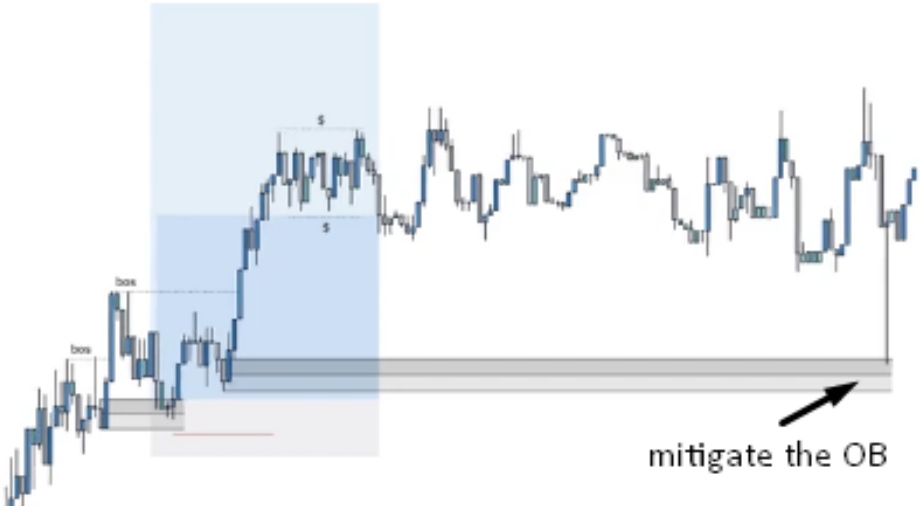

Now this is like a nice flag pattern, doesn´t it to go along impulse up, which is the flagpole, the flag, people looking to get involved, I don´t know maybe on the retrace or the 3rd touch, we know whatever, we push down, push up.

Now Im not sure what happens next we could push up from here, but we may push down, its very likely.

So we continue ranging, and now we are pushing down, so this shows me price stalling a little bit, as if we look down, we know we was clearly putting in that momentum with the HHs and HLs, mitigations.

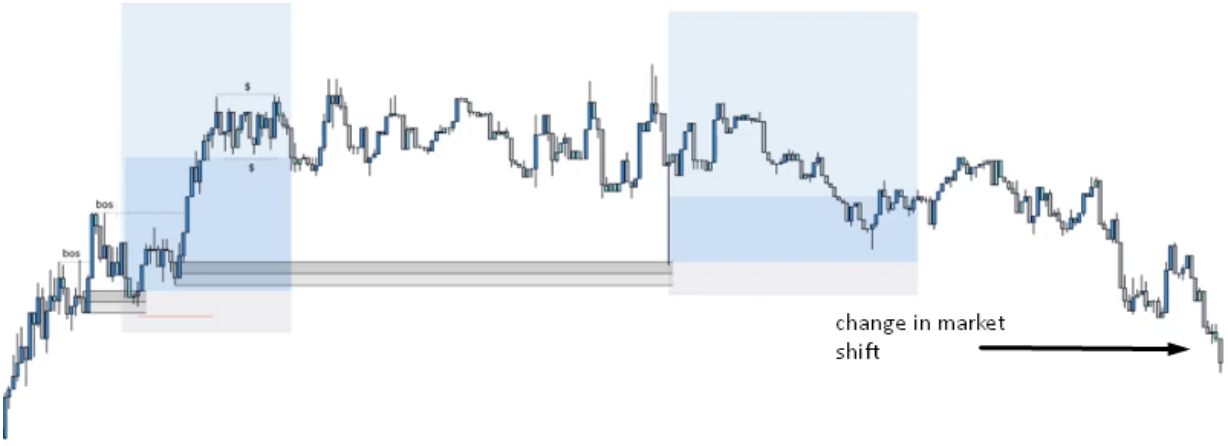

Now we are ranging, but we are still in a bullish order flow, so the anticipation is still long until we see otherwise.

Ok so we do push down, as we did think we would, and we have gone messy with price action.

And look at what have we got here, so this is just building liquidity, but look here, what is that? Is a mitigation of this OB.

So this is not random, its happening for a reason, building liquidity, grabbing liquidity, mitigation, continuation.

Now do we push up from here, now we come down to fill the wick, but this is getting messy, but we can see if we would have set an entry with 2 pips stop loss, we would have managed probably up here, but this is where prices then start to push down and we are seeing that change in market shift.

On the 15m we had a lovely leg to the upside with a lot of opportunity. It won´t always continue, we bos and then we can see we have got range bound price action, we wicked in, so if we took this entry here, we wouldn´t have lost money, and then we are now starting to bos.

> So before I just do that video on order flow, just to show about the opportunity that we do have, and not to get fomo, because there is always entries within entries, that we can take.